THE ONLOOKER

WILBUR D. NESBIT.

She cannot make a biscuit.
He cannot make a cent.
She knows no thing of broiling.
He is not built for toiling.
Yet still they think they'll risk it
Though he can't pay the rent—
She cannot make a biscuit.
He cannot make a cent.

She rises late of mornings.
He stays out late of nights.
She plays quite well at eucher.
He has no heap of lucre.
And yet in spite of warnings
Their troth they want to plight;
She rises late of mornings.
He stays out late at night.

She cannot fry potatoes.
He cannot drive a nail.
She never had a worry.
He never had a hurry.
She cannot slice tomatoes.
At beating rugs he'd fail;
She cannot fry potatoes.
He cannot drive a nail.

She is no good at dusting.
He cannot mend a chair.
Nor can he build a fire.
Yet she is his desire.
And with affection trusting
She knows they'll have no care—
She is no good at dusting.
He cannot mend a chair.

They'll blame it all on Cupid
When life is going wrong.
And each will scold the other
And she'll go home to mother
And say that he is stupid
While he'll use phrases strong.
They'll blame it all on Cupid
When life is going wrong.

He Will Not Down.

The man with the glittering whiskers suddenly appears at the desk of the sunken-eyed hireling with the recalcitrant fountain pen, and says:

"I was passing the office when this occurred to me, and I rushed in to give it to you while it is fresh. What is the difference between a man who has been marooned on an island whose only population is polar bears, upon the flesh of which animals he has been compelled to subsist for two years—what is the difference between him and a man who saunters into a palatial hotel, is given a seat near a window before a table spread with the whitest linen and the choicest cut glass, and to whom an obsequious waiter deferentially hands a menu?"

The pale bondsman shakes his head petulantly, and the man with the glittering whiskers explains:

"One has his fill of bear and the other has his bill of fare."

And the sad wind mournfully sighs the requiem of dying autumn through the iridescent foliage of the monarchs of the forest.

Deserved Rebuke.

The young man across the aisle from the beautiful young woman continues to wink slyly at her. She draws herself up haughtily and says:

"Sir! You are like all the men—"

"I beg your pardon," he interrupts. "I have an affection of the optic muscles which causes my eyelid to quaver peculiarly. I trust it has not annoyed you."

"I was about to say," she continued, "you are like all the men—one never knows when you are in earnest."

Only Aggravated It.

"What! Smoking again?" asks the friend. "I thought you quit smoking the first of the year in order to save money to make up for your wife's extravagance."

"So I did," puffs the backslider. "But she took my cigar money and was more extravagant than ever."

Within a Year or So.

Within a year or so from now we'll see great coveys in the sky Of monster birds that seem somehow To need no rest as on they fly.

But we shall not express surprise By written word or word of mouth— The flying coveys in the skies Will be the airships going south.

Unhappy Man.

"You don't seem to be enjoying your meal," we say to the guest at our left.

"No," he admits. "Whenever I am getting a good dinner, the pleasure of over-eating is marred by the knowledge that I will suffer later for my greediness."

WHAT PUZZLES THE SENATOR

Statesman Wants to Know Why Cats Discriminated Against Cross-Eyed Brother.

A senator came into the cloakroom in a rather pensive mood and stood silent for some minutes—thoughtfully smoking. It was supposed that some problem of legislation lay heavy on his mind, until he broke the silence, without even a prelude:

"I have been bothered with rats and it makes me nervous because I have been reading so much about the bubonic plague. We had six cats in the house, but suddenly five left, leaving a lonesome Tabby. I tried a ball of yarn on him. Every time he jumped after that ball he struck wide of the mark. Then I caught him, looked closer at him and, behold, the cat was cross-eyed!"

"What puzzles me now is to decide whether or not there is an aristocracy of cat life into which a crooked-eyed cat cannot come. He was evidently an outcast and a pariah with his kind, for he carefully kept his corner all the time the other cats were around. Now, the rats left with the cats, and what I want to know is whether there is not some feeling of caste among rats as well as cats in refusing to even associate with a cross-eyed cat. No bubonic plague, gentlemen, with cross-eyed cats available. It's in the old Hindu Hoodoo book."—National Magazine.

Sign Language

An English ethnologist has discovered that deaf-mutes are frequently able to understand the signs used instead of words by many savage tribes. Thus in Berlin he found that deaf-mute children understood, without previous instruction, the signs employed, according to Sir Richard Burton, by the Arapahoe Indians for such words as mother, sister, yes, no, truth, lie, food, thinking, seeing, trade, day.

This fact, together with others of a similar nature, indicating a striking identity in the sign language used in widely separated parts of the earth, have led to the suggestion that mankind may originally have had a "natural language" of signs, common to all races.

Men and Morality.

All the great ethical teachers from Aristotle and Plato down to Sidgwick and Spencer have been "contemptible" men. Man, and not woman, has created that immense moral force, a public conscience.—Harold Owen, in London Chronicle.

Rotterdam's Idea.

Every street car in Rotterdam carries—check by Jowl with the fare register—a first-aid-to-the-injured outfit of bandages, etc.—Ohio State Journal.
